Catalog Description

Why begin the study of literature with poems? Written words are the building blocks of literature, and poetry, in Coleridge’s famous equation, is “the best words in the best order.” To be understood and appreciated, poetry requires a close attention to words and their ordering as they are read and reread. All good literature requires such attention, but, practically speaking, poetry provides the best way to acquire the art of rereading because of its shorter forms. More importantly, poetry can be the most emotionally intense and satisfying of literary forms. We will read a small number of poems written in English from the sixteenth to the twentieth centuries from several genres—sonnet, ode, elegy, verse epistle, satire, villanelle—and on several subjects—love, death, and politics. Poets will include William Shakespeare, Emily Dickinson, and William Butler Yeats.

Requirements and Procedures

Since it is impossible to understand and appreciate a poem without understanding what its words mean, the first few classes will begin with a quiz about one or more words from the day’s reading. You need to learn how to use the most important reference work for the study of English literature, the Oxford English Dictionary. After two or three weeks, the daily quiz will concern the poems. By noon of the day of each class you must send me by email a question on a poem. I will choose from your emails for a short quiz, which will take place at the beginning of class.

You must write three essays, the first two approximately 1,250 words long and the third, approximately 1,500 words long. The first essay is due October 9 at 11:59 pm, the second, November 13 at 11:59 pm, and the third, December 8 at 11:59 pm. If you’d like me to read a draft of your essay before submitting it to be graded, I’ll try to do so provided that you send it to me a couple of days before it is due.

Roughly two-thirds of your grade will be based on the essays, and the other third on your quizzes and participation in class. You must receive a passing grade on all of the essays to pass the class.

The easiest way to communicate with me is by email, but I am happy to speak to you in person by appointment. My office is 208 Dabney.
